---Questions---

- How do you feel about trying sports that have potential for serious injuries?
 - I would not try them
 - Low risk
 - I would try it once or maybe twice just for the experience, but I would not do it again if I ultimately determine that the sport is not worth the potential injuries
 - Moderate risk
 - I would be up for it regardless
 - High risk

- When you develop an illness, what do you typically do?
 - Go immediately to the doctor to have it checked
 - Low risk
 - Give it a week or so in case it heals on its own. If it still has not healed after some time, then I go to the doctor.
 - Moderate risk
 - Unless I feel it is very severe, I usually just let it be and hope my it heals on its own

- High risk
- Your friend group wants to do an activity that you feel uncomfortable or unsafe doing. How do you generally act in these situations?
 - I usually just join regardless
 - High risk
 - I carefully assess the activity's danger level and will only join if I feel ok with the danger it can possibly pose
 - Moderate risk
 - I will be honest and tell my group that I am not comfortable with the activity and opt out
 - Low risk
